How will the Shelby county ten vote on matters affecting the interests of Memphis, is the question. An effort is being made to withdraw the tenth ward from the city, and another effort is being made to destroy the Taxing-District form of govern-ment. Lobbyists will be at Nashville to carry out both of those schemes, and will probably be successful if the people most interested do not kee awake. -San Francisco has developed in the line of rapid trausit in a somewhat different way from New York. They have steam transit on their sangue roads, but the motive power is applied by underground cables, which progel the street cars at the rate of eight miles as bour, which is said to be two miles faster than they can go by horse power. Lenbrie's Theater. Haverly's Mastodon minstrels gave a mat ince yesterday afternoon and a farewell per-formance last night. Both entertainments were well attended. The company left last night for Evansville, Indiana.

To-night at the Theater Herne's Hearts of Out will be presented with new scenery and mechanical effect. Of the play and company the New Orleans Picayane says: "Hearts of Ook is a curious, and yet a pretty production. It interests one from the first act, and grows more absorbing in interest as the story unfolds and the plot is revealed. It is so simple and natural that one can enjoy it vith a degree of comfort not always felt. The sensation is all the more refreshing. There is a complete absence of any straining after effect.

The climaxes are very natural and nothing is said or done to offend the most refined taste. The world is full of 'Owen Garraways,' 'Terry Dennisons,' and 'Chrystals.' They are homely people, but they are not entirely mythical—only the world, which cannot appreciate the staunchness of their true hearts of oak, loes not see them. 'Owen Garraway' is a clever impersonation. Mr. James A. Herne is seen this character at his best. He invests the bluff, well-meaning old salt, with marked individuality worthy of his reputation as an actor. It was a handsome piece of character acting. Terry Dennison' was poorly presented by Frank E. Alken. Despite his burly figure, he is not an ideal sailor-miller of the drama. He lacks naturalness and vigor, and in some scenes he is quite deficient in feeling.

There is the one weak and in the cast. Misin some scenes he is quite deficient in feeling.
'Terry' is the one weak spot in the cast. Miss Genevieve Rodgers is always charming when girlish simplicity is demanded. The little actress has a pleasant method, and has some little reputation in the south. Those who have had the good fortune to have seen Miss Rodgers's 'Maud Muller' need not be told she Rodgers's 'Maud Muller' need not be told she is pleasing in her lines. Last night the lady was taken suddenly ill after the third act, which compelled her retirement. Her part was pleasantly, if not acceptably, filled by Dollie Hamilton at a moment's notice. Of course the announcement of Miss Rodgers's indisposition threw a damper over the house which even 'Owen's' garrulity could not lift. Miss Jeanne Harold is quite pleasing in her conception of 'Annt Betsy.' This lady has talent that fits her for better roles than old women, yet like the true artiste, she sinks women, yet, like the true artiste, she sinks herself in the interest of her art, and none deserve a more complimentary notice than Miss Harold. The baby is a stunner, and no mistake about it, either. Little Alice Hammistake about it, either. Little Alice Hamilton is the most consummate little child actress on the boards. She not only played 'Little Chrystal' well, but looked it to perfection. 'Uncle Davy' (Wm. H. Compton) and 'Ruby Darrel' (Harry Mainhall) were acceptably rendered. The realistic charms of this drama must be seen to be appreciated. No such mechanical effects have we ever witnessed on the stage. In the first act, the tife-line and raging surf, were extremely natural.
